

Hiring an educational consultant to go from wait-listed to accepted

Description

We know families who have engaged the services of an educational consultant to help get them moved from “wait-listed” status to “accepted” at their first or second choice school. This doesn’t always work and there are no guarantees. However, there are educational consultants who know the admissions directors at top schools extremely well and who will probably know which schools will be admitting students from their wait-lists and which schools will not. If you are really unsure how to deal with your child being wait-listed or declined admission, it may be worth a consultation with an educational consultant. These private school experts can also help you understand how to move forward with the admissions process from where you are now. In our opinion, anything that will help you get your child the education you want for him/her is worth considering.

We have a great list of educational consultants on this blog.

Category

1. Beyond The Brochure

Tags

1. Getting off wait-list
2. hiring an educational consultant

Date Created

March 29, 2010

Author

admin