

LA Private Elementary School Buzzâ€¦!

Description

default watermark

- We hear that a private elementary school located on Mulholland sent at least one mom an email telling her that her child was accepted. A few hours later, she got an email saying her child had not been accepted. Luckily, this family had other acceptance letters. A Big Oops!
- According to one prominent Westside education consultant 2011-12 was one of the most difficult years to get into some schools. Why? At older, more established schools, alumni now have kids entering kindergarten who are legacies. That combined with concern about public school budget cuts helped spur applications to private elementary schools. Even second and third tier schools were sending out rejection letters, according to our source.
- Interestingly, we spoke to an admissions director at a top private elementary school in the LA suburbs. This AD told us that in the past, many ADs placed heavy weight on the writing and fine motor skills portion of the observation and testing process. Nowadays, more emphasis is being placed on the childâ€™s memory skills, language proficiency in response to the interview questions and the childâ€™s ability to organize his or her thoughts.
- We hear that a very prominent private elementary school has a mess on its hands. Apparently, at a 4th graderâ€™s birthday party at a private home, a dad of one kid, after having a drink or two, headed out onto the basketball court to play with the kids. This dad collided with a 4th grader and the dad broke his arm in the collision. The dad is reportedly suing the kid and possibly the kidâ€™s family. The kid involved in the collision and his siblings abruptly left the schoolâ€“can you blame them?. Now, thereâ€™s a dispute over the familyâ€™s request that the school refund their tuition. The school is refusing to return the tuition. The dad is married to a member of the schoolâ€™s board of directors. Can you say bad horrendous dad behavior?
- For those of you who live in The 818, Los Encinos, Sierra Canyon and Childrenâ€™s Community Circle are favorites of one very experienced LA education consultant.

- Please join us! We still have a few spots open for our Wed. April 20th, 7:30 p.m. event at the Beverly Hills Country Club: Demystifying The Private Elementary School Admissions And Financial Aid Process. To register, click on link: <http://www.getintoprivateschool.com/insiders-game.html>
- Check out The School Boards, an online message and resource site for all things school related.

To leave a comment, click on "comments" below. Your comment can be anonymous. Just scroll down until you see the "anonymous" option. Sometimes Google Blogger requires you to click post several times.

Category

1. Beyond The Brochure

Date Created

April 15, 2011

Author

admin

default watermark