

Reader Emails: Your Perspective About Fall 2014 Admissions Letters

Description

We get more emails than comments on this blog from our wonderful readers. So, we thought weâ€™d share a few of the genuine, heartfelt messages weâ€™ve received in the past few days.

â€œWe got into 5 schools. It feels great after trying before and getting so much rejection!â€• â€”Westside Mom â€œI wanted to thank you for your blog. I am a parent on the Westside and a reader of your blog â€œBeyond The Brochure,â€• which has been a great resource for my family. We applied to 5 elementary schools for Kindergarten admissions for fall 2014. Your blog has been great, and it was an excellent source of information for us throughout this process. I wanted to thank you again so much. â€”â€œWestside Dad â€œIt didnâ€™t work out for us this year. We applied to one school but didnâ€™t get in. Upset and discouraged. â€”Santa Monica Mom

“We were accepted to 3 of the 4 schools we applied to. I am telling you” for the two schools that were our top choices, we followed your book and blog advice to a T. From the thank you notes to the tours to the essays, etc.” Pasadena Mom

“I’m having trouble choosing between schools that are very similar.” Los Angeles Mom

“When I called one school, they basically acted like we shouldn’t bother applying. Another school dismissed me as fast as they could. That was a big turnoff. My child isn’t old enough to apply until next year, but I won’t forget. This is a two-way process.” Los Angeles Mom

“Two For Two” Valley Mom

“This process sucks! It really does. Well, I said that before my kid got in everywhere but I STILL think it sucks.” Hancock Park Mom

“Got in, got wait-listed and got rejected! thanks for your blog!” Culver City Mom
