

Separating Twins in School: What I Wish I Had Known by Gina Osher

Description

My good friend, Gina Osher, writes the wonderful blog, The Twin Coach. Gina's boy/girl twins just started kindergarten at a Westside private school. Here's her recent blog piece about whether to separate them in different classes:

Have you ever heard that comment "I was a great parent until I became one"? I feel that way a bit about starting my kids in Kindergarten. I was a huge proponent of separating twins in school until I actually had to do it myself. Now I find myself longing for the simple days of preschool when they were in one, cozy classroom.

Don't get me wrong. I am not changing my stance on separating multiples in school, I know it was the right thing to do for my children. I can tell already that they will be so much better off being in separate classrooms. But Mommy is having a hard time. Actually, mommy might be having a bit of a mental breakdown.

To continue reading, click on the link below:

<http://www.thetwincoach.com/2012/09/separating-twins-in-school-what-i-wish.html>

Category

1. Beyond The Brochure

Tags

1. Multiples in Private School
2. Separating Twins in School
3. The Twin Coach Blog

Date Created

October 8, 2012

Author

admin